By Dana Adams Schmidt BEIRUT, Jan. 8 (NYT).-For the third time in a week Israeli ets strafed targets in southern Lebanon today as Lebanese Minister of the Interior Kamal Jumblatt announced an agreement with commandos to refrain from shooting across the border. The agreement, which Mr. Jumblatt announced after a two-hour ceting with a delegation from the Amman-based Armed Struggle Command of the commandos' organizations, appeared to be part of the minister's efforts to spare Lebanon from the fury of Israeli reprisals. The Israeli aircraft today hit camps—on the western side of Mount Hermon in the areas ot Rachaya Foukas, Kfar Chouba,

Kear Haman and Ain Qiniya. A military spokesman said that one Lebanese was wounded, a car destroyed and some houses damaged in the last three of the villages. Lebanese anti-aircraft fire opened up, but the Lebanese Air

Issues Plea For Defense Asks Guarantee of All Aid to Accused

Soviet Jurist

By Bernard Gwertzman MOSCOW, Jan. 8 (NYT).-A Soviet Supreme Court justice, rankled that official legal bodies often show disrespect for defense attorneys, called yesterday in the weekly Literaturnaya Gazeta for steps to guarantee that those accused of crimes receive the strongest possible defense in court.

Grigory Z. Anashkin, chairman of the Criminal Affairs College of the Supreme Court and a full member of the court as well, said many defense attorneys who argue vigor-ously in favor of their clients suffer abuse for disagreeing with guilty verdicts.

It is common, Mr. Anashkin said, for judges to claim that any lawyer who dissents from a court's decision is wrong and deserves a reprimand.

A defense lawyer must defend his client, Mr. Anashkin said. Those who believe differently "forget the most simple truth—the defense lawyer is not a court. He is not given the right to find the defendant guilty."

Mr. Anashkin, who frequently ha criticized abuses in the Soviet judi-cial system, added: "It is quite irregular for some courts, prosecutors, investigators and police to underestimate the role and the im-portance of defense lawyers." Such lawyers, he said, represent "ove of the most significant institutions of wiminal justice."

Mr. Nixon can trace much of his inflation troubles to President Johnson's record peacetime deficit of $25 billion in fiscal 1968, a year of brisk economic activity.

There are those in Congress who argue it would be equal folly to shoot for a deflationary budget surplus when many of the economic weather vanes point to a husiness inflation is still prevailing, these legislators counter that price changes have historically lagged behind the aggregate economy.

Mr. Mills, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said any excise tax increases that Mr. Nixon proposes will get prompt consideration, but he still prefers expenditure control as the best way of balancing the budget. No Decision Yet

Although no firm decision has been made. Treasury officials have let it be known they are working on a revenue package that could raise as moch as $5 billion more in the next fiscal year.

This would include unspecified ncreases in the federal excises on alcoholic beverages and tobacco extension of excises on telephone calls and new cars at their present rates (they are scheduled to be reduced Dec. 31) and a speedup in the collection of estate and gift taxes that would produce a oneshot revenue bonanza in 1971. The rationale is that an increase in income taxes after cuts were voted only a month ago would put too great a strain on governmental credibility. Hence the resort to increased excises, and those designed to penalize personal habits of generally dubious benefit. The speedup in estate and gift tax collection has ample precedent in the previous Democratic admin-

The White House is still project ing revenues for the present fiscal year at $198.8 billion and outlays at $192.9 billion for a surplus of $5.9 billion. But most officials privately expect receipts to be less and spending more.

Mr. Nixon is expected to reveal the figures in his budget message later this month. Estimates range between $203 billion and $207 billion for ontlays. Revenues are ex-pected to rise very little under present tax law from the $198.8billion projection for the current year. The normal growth in re-ceipts and the gain from termina-tion of the investment tax credit apparently would be largely wiped out by phasing out of the income tax surcharge and by tax relief. Diminuendo at the Majestic

The Paris talks are at something worse than stalemate: they are actually diminishing in scale and significance. The "other side" have chosen to try to adjust the rank of their participants to what they consider to be the rank of the American delegation. and the de-escalation of diplomacy is continuing at a depressing rate.

But the quarrels over rank, like those over the shape of the table, are merely outward and visible signs of a lack of inward grace. The United States has clearly lost hope of substantive discussion: the North Vietnamese and NLF do not seem to have had any from the first-unless the acceptance of concessions from the South Vietnamese and Americans can be so described.

It is still within the power of the other side to raise the level of diplomacy in Paris. The military situation in Viotnam has certainly not changed to their advantage, even with the departure of substantial segments of American forces. Nor, although pressure for immediate withdrawal from Southeast Asia continues in the United States, is that pressure likely to alter administration policies drastically. The question mark continues to be the ability of the Sonth Vietnamese Army and people to continue the fight during the present gradual removal of American fighting units.

This is a matter of some dublety in the United States. But it is also a problem for the Viet Cong and their Northern allies. A rapid, unconditional departure of the Amerlean presence would have, in all probability. given Hanoi the victory it sought, quickly and without too much additional fighting. The present pace withholds immediate victory and at least raises the possibility that it could be indefinitely delayed.

Under such circumstances, it might well be to the advantage of Ho Chi Minh's successors to seek a viable political settlement now, and really allow the people of Vietnam to make their own decision, rather than continue the war into a dreary, costly and uncertain future. It was Napoleon III who remarked that he didn't like war because chanco played too great a part in it; he did not follow his own insights in this matter, and came to grief.

Even a tacit reduction in the scale of the conflict-such as seems to be in progress now-holds many imponderables, as well as the very concrete facts of death and wounds. An end to the sterile exchanges in Paris, some mitiative from the other side, or simply a willingness to explore possibilities beyond the fixed conditions it has laid down, would be far better for Vietnam than simply letting the fire smolder out.

Telling It Like It Is-in Vietnam

One does not ordinarily expect criticism of the house in a house organ, and one does not ordinarily expect criticism of the armed forces on an armed forces network. There is something essentially incongruous, therefore, about the complaint made the other evening by Spec. 5 Robert Lawrence on an 11 p.m. newscast over the Armed Forces Vietnam Network, that he and his fellownewsmen-in-uniform are "not free to tell the truth." The truth is often elusive and uncertain. As a newsman, Lawrence said, "I am pledged to tell the truth at all times." As an enlisted man in the U.S. Army, however, he is pledged to obey orders at all times. What he really means, of course, is that he is not free to tell the truth as he sees it when his superiors see it differently.

Lawrence has been running film on his newscast about the Saigon black market and about censorship of newspapers by the Thieu government. In consequence, he was suspended from his assignment. A similar fate has lately befallen several other enlisted men who made statements on the air deemed derogatory to the Vietnamese government, the American mission in Vietnam or to the Vice-President of the United States.

It is not surprising that this should be so. commander in the field. He is responsible for everything said over the TV network in his jurisdiction; and he is as unlikely as the owner or manager of a TV station here at home to allow a newscaster to go on very long saying things he believes to be false or injurious to the main purpose of his mission. The policy of the armed forces is to keep off the air any information deemed detrimental to the morale of the American troops, anything that might be helpful to the enemy and anything likely to prove offensive to a host country where American forces are functioning as visitors.

An armed forces network really should not be confused with an independent TV station or network in the United States. It does not operate, like the facility at home, under the protection of the First Amendment. No one ought to suppose that it is free in the sense that a TV facility is free in America. And no one onght to suppose that individual military newscasters in a combat area can enjoy the same range of discretion that is accorded to civilian newscasters at home.

All the same, it is of great importance that newscasters in uniform be accorded the largest measure of freedom consonant with the welfare and safety of the troops in the field. A significant measure of that welfare and safety lies in confidence on the part of the troops that they are getting the truth. The operation of an armed forces TV net- mind. whole point, therefore, if a WOLK TOSES ITS TV in a theater of war is operated by the commander is needlessly or foolishly or doctrinairely repressive. Some of the repression, or censorship, in Vietnam looks foolish.

An Alliance That Never Was

By C. L. Sulzberger

SCHRUNS, Austria, - One casuzity of the 1970s will almost certainly be the SEATO alliance devised in 1954 after France was driven from Vietnam and its former colony partitioned. SEATO has never worked in the sense of safeguarding the area it hoped to protect or mustering in its defense ell signator; powers, but it did achieve the principal aim seen for it by its sponsor, John Foster

That aim was to enable the President of the United States, by means of an advance blank check signed by the Congress, to take swift action when and if needed to send military aid to any Southeast Asian country menaced by aggression. South Vietnam was the country Dulles particularly had in Both Britain and France had sought to gain U.S. encouragement for a similar alliance long before the fateful battle of Dien Bien Phu, where France's defeat changed Dulles's mind. At that time London and Paris still had extensive Asian colonial commitments and wanted help. However, Dulles refused the "stigma of colonislism" in a regional pact with Britain and France.

In April, 1954, the secretary of state was commuting between Washington and Paris. April 14 he told me: "The Communists must be made to realize that they ere up against something strong enough to force them to abandon plans to extend their rule over Southeast Asia."

Desperate Plea Ten days later, back in Paris to didn't get its allies. South Viethear a desperate Prench plea for nam was protected by special American support at Dien Bien SEATO protocol but the only Phu, he explained that intervenmajor military support afforded would be an act of war and the President could not take such a step under his peacetime executive powers." He told the French: "The request might be regarded dif-ferently if there were actually an operational Southeast Asia alliance with France and the United States

By then it was too late, largely because of Dulles's own stem concepts. He had been insisting the United States could only participate in Asian regional defense without colonial partners and even considered President Magsaysay of the Philippines as a possible al-

Dien Bien Phn and the Geneva Conference which partitioned Vietnam changed his mind. Oddly enough, Dulles joined Britain and France in an Asian alliance despite the remaining colonial stigma precisely when they lost their France was evacuating troops from Southeast Asia and Britain was pulling in its claws.

Senate Backing ...

But, as Dulles explained to me in Bangkok, Feb. 23, 1955; "The President didn't have the necessary authority from Congress to intervene [prior to SEATO] and there was no assurance that we would have had any allies if we had acted... The treaty assures that we have allies here." He was proud that the Senate had ratified SEATO by its largest majority in history—86 to 1. Dulles achieved only half his goal. The President got his au-thority but the United States tion was impossible under the U.S. to U.S. and Salgon forces came Constitution. He added: "That from South Korea, not a signetory.

Australia, Thailand and the Philippines sent some useful help; Britain offered verbal encouragement; France and Pakistan, alliance members, didn't give any as-sistance and ultimately encouraged the other side."

However, Dulles achieved his legal aim. Sir Robert Scott, Brit-ish high commissioner for Southeast Asia, told me in 1959: "SEATO now constitutes a certain guar-antee that if there is an open armed aggression there will be an American reply."

Although Scott's analysis was exact, the alliance proved to be primarily an American legalistic device. Neither British nor French troops helped when President Ken. nedy used the powers arranged by. Dulles and sent U.S. combat forces into Vietnam. Legal ingenuity can sometimes backfire in foreign policy. Franregionel militery effectiveness: cois de Callières, cabinet secretary to France's King Louis XIV. wrote: "In general the training of a lawyer breeds habits and dispositions of mind which are not favorable to the practice of diplomacy." The one outstanding consequence of SEATO was not to bar Communists from Southeast Asia bot to bring Americans in. Indeed. the principal argument between Congress and the White House has been over presidential "peacetime executive powers" despite the Sen-ate's treaty endorsement.

In any case, as the war's "Viet-namization" proceeds into the Seventies with the eventual dream ed purpose always was to give spe-of extricating the last uniformed American, the SEATO apparatus is bound to disappear in theory as it already has in fact. An elliance with minimal allies is not to be recommended and this one's avowcial anthority to the U.S. Presi-

a deputy mayor of New York City nicely illustrates the possibilities of the unique political position Mayor John Lindsay has attained. But it also suggests the mayor's major difficulty, which is that his cards may be stronger to hold than

By his re-election on the Liberal and Independent lines last year, Lindsay became the most successful independent political leader in the nation. Cast aside by the Republicans, yet not officially adopted by the Democrats, the mayor was divested not only of the advantages of major-perty af-filiation but of the disadvantages. As a result, he is being forced to put together for the nation's greatest city a nonpartisan indepen-dent, fusion administration. That is by no means the same thing as nonpolitical, but it gives that appearance, and thus puts. John Lindsay out in front of those considerable forces in America that appear to be tired of the Old Politics. (narticularly the carnet Politics (particularly the gamey municipal variety), dis'llusioned by the old parties, and yearning for leaders that somehow seem to transcend standard political atti-tudes. Both Ronald Reagan and Engene McCarthy, to name two, have benefited in recent years from this revulsion against politics-as-usual and Lindsay has gone them one better in shedding the party label entirely, if involuntarily.

In the case of the Morgenthan appointment, Lindsay gained not only an exceptionally able Democrat to go with the Republican and Inheral deputy mayors he already had. He also was able to make a gracious and generally applauded nonpartisan gesture, immediately on the heels of President Nixon's partisan and generally deplored demand for Morgenthau's resignation as federal attorney for the Southern District of New York. "Nixon loses, Lindsay wins," is the way one astute New York political leader summed up the Morgenthau episode. "And Rockefeller This may not be too wide of the mark because Gov. Nelson Rocke-feller, who is running for a fourth term, obviously has to look over his shoulder at Lindsay. If the mayor should decide, to turn Democrat and run against the government the Morgenthan appointment would help mightly to smooth his path to the nomination.

But that kind of speculation leads also to the weakness of Lindsay's position. To run for governor, he

NEW YORK—The appointment nomination, he would have to win of Robert M. Morgenthan as a primary against numerous Democrats, not only losing his aboveweakening his new party's always tenuous unity; to venture into a state campaign at all, he would have to give up or at least risk the very office he fought so hard for last year, which might well diminish his political base in the city. Lindsay has carefully kept oper the option of challenging Rockefeller a strategy clearly to the mayor's advantage. Since the mere threat of his candidacy is likely to make the governor more forthcoming in his response to New York City's problems. Moreover, the well-known personal rivalry of the two men, as well as the no-merous state-city conflicts they personify, might push them toward a showdown in the voting booth.

Unfamiliar Ground

That may sometimes seem ap-pealing to Lindsey, as he confronts the staggering task of governing the city, and contemplates his lack of real means to do so. But if he runs for governor, he will be fight-ing on Bockefeller's ground, not his own, amid the Old Politics of partisanship-and as something of an apostate, at that. So the mayor is getting some strong advice to stick it out where he is, widen his leadership of a kind of independent "third force" in American politics, and play for the political breaks. This would he a long gamble, but for high

President Nixon, for instance, is not without his own imposing problems—Vietnam, inflation, the demands on the budget, the conthroing race conflict—and his right flank appears permanently imperiled by George Wallace. The Democrats bave lots of presidential hopefuls, but not a one who could score more than a few points higher than Lindsay in a recent Harris Poll matchup against Nixon. (Hubert Humphrey was only 37 percent to Lindsay's 29.)

John Lindsay is elready a personal symbol of the struggle to cope with the nightmare of urben ·life in America; even his failures as mayor, of which there will surely be more suggest how overwhelming the problems are, how madequately organized the American system, how askew the na-tional priorities. "Soul music and soul digging are alien to a socialist way of life, let alone to socialist morality." the Nationalist fumed in an editorial

Soul "tries to intoxicate our youth with all the false promises in the world," the editorial said: "Even as an instrument of self rediscovery, soul gives us nothing more than telling us that we are black. It suggests nothing as a means towards our emancipation Soul is not revolutionary.

Does this then not explain why the imperialists have been very keen to import this cancerous ulcer into our country?" asked the newspaper, which does not always reflect government opinion

The capital's other Englishlanguage newspaper, the Tan-zanian Standard, reluctantly took up the cudgels in an editorial that compared the re-gional commissioner's order to King Canute's wave-stopping that 'soul' music is rather_less pure than its name suggests," snifted the Standard, which is privately owned by a European firm. "It is an invitation to decadence and the worst type of Afro-American importation, owing nothing to the spiritualist origins of the Deep-South plantation music, but a good (or bad) deal to the pot-and-hippy era in which black power is paraded as a talisman for the ultra-permissive society." Enforcement Problem

But, the newspaper sadly noted, "short of a house-tohouse search for the forbidden music," there was no effective way to enforce the ban. "And can the police give a precise definition of soul, anyway?"

That was done by the soul diggers themselves in a cascade of letters that poured into the Standard, which admitted that all of the 35 letters it received backed soul.

One letter printed by the Standard came from Bob Eubanks, an Afro-American studying in Dar es Salasm:

"Soul music comes from the blues, which is Afro-American music . . . brothers and sisters of Tanzania do not forsake your ancestors who died in that and foreign land of The letters provoked the Nationalist to counterattack. The ban has brought to the surface hitherto hidden reactionary elements within our society, disguised as 'soul diggers'," said the Nationalist.

The new tactic of the imperalists is to unleash a cultural aggression through films and various types of neurotic dins, which for commercial purposes are named rock 'n' roll. 'shake,' and now 'soul'."

The letter writers are "reac: tionary, bourgeois, lackeys, fifth column," the newspaper asserted

The storm continued for sev eral more days, before Radio Tanzania, which is also government-owned and which is said to be considered by President Julius Nyerere as more important than the local press, delivered its brief, sharp view on the soul ban.

In a parable, the radio pointedly said that people could evade a ban on what they really liked and public officials would be foolish to try to enforce it.

Since then, soul has again wafted on the soft Indian Ocean breezes that blow over Dar es Salasm at this time of year.

6 Nazi Units Spied on Pius, Priest Says

ROME, Jan. 8 (UPD .-- As an island of neutrality in World War II, the Vatican received extraordinary attention—and, an American priest contends, was a target of Nazi espionage.

Nazi agents from six organizations, including the Gestapo, re-portedly spied on the Vatican and even kept Pope Plus XII under

But, the Rev. Robert A. Graham said in a report published yesterday in the Italian Jesuit magazine Civiltà Cattolica, the Nazi effort was not always successful. Father Graham, a 57-year-old Jesuit scholar and journalist, said that evidence he found in archives and documents at the Vatican Washington, Berlin and Bonn showed that some Vatican informers deliberately fed false information to their Nazi employers.

Unreliable Reports

The German ambassador to the Holy See also warned the German Poreign Ministry to beware of Vatican reports because, Pather Graham said, they were likely to be based on unreliable rumors and

According to Father Graham, operations at the Vatican included apping telephones, monitoring radio broadcasts, decoding telein Roman seminaries and pontifical nstitutions

Reports of wartime ecclesiastical spionage have circulated from time time in Rome since the war ended 25 years ago. But Father Graham's allegations are the most detailed so far.

He said that Martin Bormann righ-ranking aide to Adolf Hitler sent an assistant named Ludwig Wemmer to Rome in 1943 to keep the German ambassador to the Holy See and Pope Plus under Another high-ranking Nazi with an interest in the Vatican, Father Graham seid, was Herbert Kappler who later became the Nazi gauleiter of Rome. He reportedly served for a time as an aide in the German Embassy and was mainly responsible for contacts with Vatican informers.

32 Congressmen Challenge Airline Fare Increases

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 (WP) .-Thirty-two congressmen asked the U.S. Court of Appeals here yester day to rescind recent airline fare increases, contending that the Civil Aeronautics Board granted without holding mandatory public hearings.

CAB and airline attorneys coun tered that the rates are technically set by the airlines and not the board and are therefore not subject to public notice or hearings Stanford Ross, representing the bipartisan group of congressmen led by John Moss, D., Calif., said the new rate formula was devised after the airlines and the CAB 'negotiated" an agreement in a series of meetings from which a number of congressmen and the general public were excluded. CAB. attorney Warren Scharfman argued that the airlines fix their own rates and the CAB either lets them go into effect automatically or suspends them pending an investigation. In the current case, all domestic carriers asked for a new formula involving numerous increases and a few decreases. The CAB "worked out" a tentative agreement for a slightly lower set of rate increases as of last Oct. 1, while the GAB studied the requested increases further, he

Omar Sharif, Team Battle At Bridge

High-Stakes Tourney Nears Half-Way Point

By Alfred Friendly

London, Jan. 8 (WP).—For a fellow who tenses up when the bridge stakes are a quarter of a cent a point, the scene at the Piccadilly Rotel today was pretty hairy: Movie star Omar Sharif and his buddies were playing 80 rubbers for stakes exactly 960 times higher—one pound, or $2.40, a point. The winner of every set of four rubbers collects another $2,400.

Sharif, in velvet coat and ruffled shirt, makes up. in his passion for bridge, for an indifference about everything else. His "Bridge Circus," which includes such grand masters as the Italians Giorgio Belladonna and Benito Garozzo, is taking on a pair sponsored by Crockford's, the big London gambling den. The five-day tournament, every afternoon and evening, is all in the good cause of making TV programs and earning a covey of sponsors some money-they hope.

And while it goes on, some 500 ticket holders settle down in g big room at the hotel and watch on illuminated score-boards and over closed circuit television what Sharif and Co. are doing in a soundproof room on the side.

Expert Kibitzers

The paying kibitzers appear to be pretty much experts themselves, a condition brought about in part, no doubt, by the fact that they can see all four hands. They groan or cheer at bad and good plays and con-vince themselves that they would have done better.

About half-way through the marathon match, Sharif was up by 5,000 points, or $12,000. The staggering sums are a bit misleading, though, for the game see-saws with the cards—it is rubber bridge, not duplicateand is bound to continue to do so. On Tuesday, the Crockford's team swung from a gain of 3,500 to a loss position of 2,000 in one hour. Still again for that quarter-cent player, dropping $120 for failure to make a potential overtrick is a bit dismaying.

Here's one of today's hands, just to illustrate what a bad guess can do to you. Sharif, North, had as partner his club member Claude Delmonly, 42, a bridge teacher in Paris. West was Jeremy Flint and East Jonathan Cansino, the boys from Crockford's.

Both sides vulnerable, West dealer: NORTH

Opening lead, king of hearts. Sharif encouraged his partner with a nine of hearts but South's next lead of a small heart was ruffed by dummy's spade five. Cansino led a low trump from dummy to his ten, losing to South's queen. At this point Delmouly might well have led another heart but instead played a small club taken by dummy's ace as Sharif dropped his queen. A diamond was led to the ace of North, who continued a small diamond to East's king. Declarer drew the remaining trumps, ending in his hand. At this point he led the nine of clubs and the question was whether to finesse for the missing jack or play it to drop. That North had two singletons and a six-card heart suit was against the odds but Cansino guessed wrong, playing low from dummy. North and South ran through the remaining good red cards for a score of down four for 1,100 points as against a possible win by Crockford's team of a 700 rub-

Comedy Bogs Down in Reality

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss PARIS, Jan. 8.—"April Fools" (at the Colisée in the original version) is a comedy with its roots firmly planted in reality. And it takes off (only mechanically) when the two principals sour away off in an sirplane at the finish.

An up-and-coming Wall Street broker, weary of the office routine, the office parties, his nagging wife and commuting to Darien, Conn., decides to run away to Paris with his employer's beautiful French wife. She has grown to despise her husband because he is a cad, a whoremaster and a boring Babbitt. The young broker's preparation and execution of his plan constitute the scenario.

The plot is so painfully platitudinous that it has been treated to some awkward firstaid in an effort to endow it with an inkling of redeeming unreality, the saving grace of sound comedy. This takes place in a scene in which the hero, full of booze, confesses to his lady love that, in a school play, he played a prince bewitched into a frog who can only be re-stored to his former state if kissed by a princess. His in-amorata thereupon kisses him. The frog-princess motif is hammered home from then on. Jack Lemmon as is his cus

"Les Contes de Grimm pour Grendes Personnes." a German film dubbed into French (at the Lord Byron) seeks to add an erotic note to a retelling of some of the famous fairy stories. Snowwhite runs about in-and often out-of a bikini and the Seven Dwarfs are suspected of keeping company with her. There is much nudity, a few passionate embraces, but no in vention in this adaptation, so childish and witless that it seems designed for befuddled watchers of late, late, late television shows.

The idea however, is not without possibilities. Nursery literature has often received serious Freudian interpretation and even the pure tales of Bea-trix Potter have been psychoanalyzed. There is opportunity in such material for a humorist as well. It remains difficult to understand why the 1980s are in vogue, but probably they are fashionable chiefly among those who are too young to remember screen musical comedies, both still possessing still attractive scores and both with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers as the star dancers, have been rereleased. "Top Hat" is at the Pagode and "Swing Time" is at the Studio Universal, both in their original versions.

Controversial Southwark

The appointment, announced yesterday, will make him suffragan hishop of the southwest London suburb of Kingston-Upon-Thames, part of the diocese of Southwark, where the clergy often take a controversial view of established Christianity.

Canon Monteflore who says that he would find it strange to consider himself the first Jewish-born Church of England bishop—is a staunch supporter of contact among different faiths. In September, 1967, he again came in for criticism from churchmen for addressing a service attended by Christians, Mos-lems, Jews, Buddhists, Sikhs and Hindus.

Canon Monteflore did not enter the priesthood until he was nearly 30 and had done five years' war service as a Royal Artillery captain. For the last seven years he has been vicar of Great St. Mary's, the Cambridge University church, where he increased undergraduate attendance by holding beat services. The bishop of Southwark, the Right Rev. Dr. Mervyn Stockwood, said that he had recommended the canon's appointment because he was a scholar and a pastor who fearlessly tried to relate the Christian faith to contemporary life.

Leading a suit at no-trump in which the defenders have all the length and strength can occasionally throw them off balance, and did so in the diagramed deal. South chose not to show his poor four-card heart suit in response to one diamond, and North made an eccentric pass. He no doubt hoped that his diamond suit could he run in no-trump and perhaps feared that East-West might find a major-suit contract after a twodiamond rebid.

When West hit on the lead of the heart deuce South was in deep trouble. He saw that the normal play of developing diamonds was doomed to fail: the defenders were sure to shift to clubs and would make three heart tricks, at least one diamond trick and at least four elub tricks. This plan might leave him with only three or four tricks instead of the five top tricks he began with.

So in the hope of spreading confusion in the enemy ranks he won the first trick in dummy with the heart ace and led the club jack. West won with the queen and the defenders took three heart tricks. In the belief that South held a club suit, West shifted to the spade ten. South won with the spade king and led the diamond jack. West covered with the queen and was permitted to Still mesmerized by South's club play, West persevered with spades and South made all the remaining tricks. He the fourth round of hearts.

Either defender might bave seen through the ruse if he had asked himself why South had not attacked the diamond suit immediately. The only possible explanation was that South was too weak in the other suits to have any hope of using diamonds, but this was a very difficult inference to draw.

Three New Novels

on Familiar Airs.

By Joseph McElroy, Harner & Row. 534 pp. $5.95.

Because of its techniques, the barrage of its detail, and even its length, many readers of this novel will be reminded of William Gaddis's "The Recognition." Joseph McElroy's book is, at least, a profoundly ambitious novel. It begins as Jack Hind. whose immediate uniqueness is his great height, is about to resume his abandoned independent search for a kidnapped child; the fact that the case has long been closed and the child given up by his now-dead parents is more of an attraction to Hind than it is a deterrent. What the novel explores, and finally resolves, is the mystery of Hind's obsession with the case, and of how his refusal to track down the clues of his own past rings an eerie parallel to the search. There are two mysterics here then: the kidnap itself, with 'ts innumerable, maddening, and seemingly endless clues, and Hind's own past, dominated by his mysterious and beloved guardian, whose pervasive presence is the novel's great strength. As Hind realizes that he has used his friends and even his wife and child as clurs. the kidnap begins to recede into the real search. McElroy's handling of the densely populated landscape against which it all takes place—Brooklyn Heights, the New England countryside, a health club, a university—amounts to a rather dazzling display of talent. His skill at conveying the quality of these locales and their inhabitants is often splendid, but the novel is an exhausting one, and a good many people will find that they tire of the kidnap long before Hind does.

For those who are willing to sit it out, "Hind's Kidnap" has real rewards. But those who drop out are not to be condemned, for McElroy has written a novel, which, unlike "The Recognitions," doesn't always compensate the reader for the demands it makes upon him.

SOMEONE ELSE By Galian Tindall, Walker. 255 pp. $5,95.

This comfortable, gossipy English novel is a bit of a soap opera, but a very creditable one that deserves a good audience here. Joanna Roux is twentynine, and happy with her seven-year-old marriage to Loic, a bright, aggressive journalist. They have a child, a good many friends, and Joanna is a sometime-author of children's books. Then Loic is killed in an accident, and it all falls apart. "Someone Else" is a detailed description of Joanna's life ring the year which follows: in its perceptions about its main character, and in its matter-offact presentation of bourgeois daily life in England, it is an absorbing, entertaining, and often a wise novel.

What Joanna discovers after Loic's death is that a great deal of what she thought of as her

While all the truths are being established, the game can hardly escape being played under a cloud. The big bad start that suspicions can gain on the facts is recalled by the aphorism that "rumor is halfway around the world before truth can get its boots on."

The fact that NBC's competitor network, the Columbia Broadcasting System, is paying big money for the Super Bowl

Quarterback Dawson has admitted to knowing as "a casual sequentance" Donald Dawson (no kin), a Detroit restaurateur arrested New Year's Day by Internal Revenue Service agents, who reported the seizure of gambling records and $450,000 in cashier's and business checks. The Chief's quarterback said he had three calls from Domaid Dawson last year, once after his father passed away and twice when he suffered knee injuries. He said they were sympathy calls.

'John and Mary'

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON. - The problems that the new frankness can get a moviemaker into are illustrated in a Dustin Hoffman-Mia Farrow film called "John and Mary."

For 90 minutes or longer, we are expected to care whether John and Mary will eat fish dinner at John's place at the end of the movie. Who cares? The problem-will John and Mary share that fish in the refrigerator?—is dullness brought to perfection.

'John and Mary' is the kind of film that used to be called a vchicle; that is, a device for keeping a etar'e face before the nublic uotil someone could provide him with a decent film script. Blg-studio Hollywood innde some entertaining vehicles in its prime out of the same sort of material that goes into "Join and Mary."

The hasic formula was: Boy meets girl, boy ioses girl, boy gets girl. In "John and Mary." the formula is crippled for yet moother celebration of the new frankness. Boy has already got girl before film even starts.

This makes it possible for the movie to open with the quintes-sential scene of the new-frankness era. Boy and girl in bed. In fact, they are waking up after several hours in bed.

After the frankness of the opening, the movie makers are in trouble. We all knew in the old movies that ofter boy met girl. lost girl and got girl. they lived happlly ever after, and we dido't want to see them do. it because there are few things duller to watch in a movie thao two people living happily ever after Such people have a few misunderstandings, eat many uninteresting meals and hold conversations of uegligible interest to anyone outside their circle. Most of us familiar with persons who are living happly ever after know that they will probably have dinner together most evenings, though a few may get divorces. "John and Mary" begins with John and Mary starting this dreary business of living happily ever after. Sure enough, they have a few ousunderstandings, eat some extremely uninteresting meals and hold cooversations of absolutely no interest at all. The big question is whether Mary will etay for dinner because that will tell us whether it's the real thing between her and John, whatever that will lead to. There is no question of its leading to anything as square as marriage, naturally.

The audience knows Mary will stay to dinner, of course, oot only because they are Dustin Hoffman and Mia Farrow and because this movie is just a vehicle, but also because they have been behaving all along just like peaple we know who are living happily ever after and dining together every evening, instead of like people who get divorces.

In short, oothing happens. We have been had (Admission: $2.60.) The people who made this movie probably think we had our money's worth in the opening acene with that matterof-fact, cool, innocent new frankness and its coy sugges-tion that seduction and having an ice cream soda after the prom are all the same in the age of enlightenment.

They are wroog. The new frankness is no longer worth $2,60. Witnessing motion pictures of two persons between sheets, be they active or passive, may be arousing when novel but lately the new frankness has been flickering inexorably, invariably, predictably, inescapably. relentlessly and— worst of all—familiarly on every movie screen in town. The hard-core is dull enough, what with all the dreary redeeming social significance one has to take with it. The innocent is indefensible. The adolescents who insist that violence on screen is immoral while iovernaking is not are perfectly right, but this is no argument for either banning violence or increasing the output of filmed lovemaking. For moral elevation we have the church; at the theater we want entertainment,

When matters reach the "John and Mary" stage, it is time to go back to the Supreme Court. Boy, having got girl, lives bappily ever after by sharing s fish with ber? You're kidding, Charley!

There are no trains but there are people living in the statioo—oo both sides of the tracks. On the upside platform, as the locals put it, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Turner now inhabit rooms built for royalty. Oo the downside, people now live in what used to be the public waiting rooms and the ticket office.

The population in Wolferton at last count was 199.

The state-owned British Rail closed Wolferton statioo two years ago in an economy drive that affected many of the country's smallest stations.

The living room of Mr. and Mrs. Turner was once called the Ceoter Hall, This, and two large bedrooms, once constituted a suite of royal waiting rooms. They were built in the statioo in 1876.

The station is only two miles from the house at Sandringham, an estate of 17,000 acres, that is one of the five residences of Queen Elizabeth II. It is there where the queeo and her family traditionally spend Christmas and the mooth of Jaouary.

Royal Purchase

In 1861, the Prince of Wales, later King Edward VII, bought Sandringham, After his marriage to Princess Alexandra of Denmark, he traveled to Wolferton in 1863 for the first time and the little station became unique.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner, who ran a newspaper shop in a nearby town and a boarding house, bought their new home at an suction in June, 1967, for the equivalent of $13,680. Mrs. Turner, quaking, went to the auctioo alone.

"I wanted to sit in the back of the room—like you do at weddings when you don't take part—but I was told the back rows were for very important people," she

"My daughter-in-law, Jennie, saw it on the telly and shouted to our son, 'Your mum, she's bought the station," Mrs. Turner said. "At one period when we first came down here people just wandered in, even coming in through the

Fireplace Blocked Off

Although Mr. Turner says the couple simply intended to be "bone idle" after not having had a holiday for 30 years, they have been repairing the bedrooms. The huge fireplace in the Center Hall has been blocked off, so the Turners draw up before an electric heater. The ceilings are so high that the 19-foot-square room will never be warm.

The firaplace "was so big." Mrs. Turner said, "yoo could almost look up it and stare at the sky."

She said the rooms had been used not only as a place for members of the royal family to recline after a train trip before they were driven to Sandringham, but as a lodge during the hunting season. Shooting lunches were served.

"But no one over slept here," she said firmly. The bedrooms still have ceiling bosses with the gilt and crimson monograms of Edward and Alexandra and the Prince of Wales's feathers.

The furniture originally in the rooms was sold before the huildings came up for nuction. But the heavy damask and satin curtains still hang and the scarlet rugs look fine.

"We painted it exactly the color it was—dawn pink," Mrs. Turner said of the first bedroom. It is unheated.

The Queen's Visit

The couple are monarchists. Mrs. Turner's face lights up a little when she remembers the day that Queen Elizabeth dropped in to see her in 1968, with her corgis. Mrs. Turner has a corgi too.

"A chauffeur came first to find out if I would be at home," Mrs. Turner said. "I was painting when the queen came—I was high up the ladder. The queen said she hoped I didn't mind her dogs being with her and that I wouldn't find it too

In Britain, it is considered bad manners to repeat in detail any conversation with the royal family, or to describe too much of the meeting. Mr. and Mrs. Turner are not breaking this unwritten rule.

The proper entrance to the one-story stone building is not from the platform of the station. On the other side of the house there are high iron gates opening on a short but imposing gravel driveway. The royal Rolls-Royce used to park in what is now Mrs. Turner's kitchen. The couple converted the space. Last May, British Rail stopped the 16 trains that used to run through Wolferton. Bus service to the nearest town s inadequate for housewives. None of the Wolfertoo women can drive. There is no meat, bread or milk for sale in the vil-Mrs. Turner, who has complained to her member of Parliament, mourns the missing trains. "It was so convenient and you could hardly hear the trains indoors," she said. "Well, you can't have everything all the time," Mr. Turner told her,

Mrs. Eleanor Curd's sixth-grade class in Washington, D.C., has voted 16-to-2 to back Millard Fillmore for President against any possible challenger. The vote at Fillmore School wos part of several events held Wednesday to commemorate the 170th birthday of the 13th President. Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel issued a procinmation declaring it Millard Filimore Day-partly in commemoration of the fact that Maryland was the only state Fillmore carried in his second presidential bid oo the American, or "Know-Nothing," ticket, A portrait of Fillmore was unveiled on the Johany Carson Show by the Millord Fillmore Birthday Club. The club had been called the Millard Fillmore Memoriai Society but members found the title too depressing. Ex-plaining why she backed Filimore, Ann Young, 11, of Miss Curd's class, said: "He wasn't biased over slavery. He backed Richard Tucker celebrated his 25th anniversary as a leading Metropolitan Opera tenor this week, and 1,000 friends in the Opera Guild gave him a lunch at the Waldorf-Astoria. Tucker, in the unidst of rehearsals for "Pagliacci," which opened Thursday, couldn't take time to eat but put in oo appearance. "Rudolf Bing didn't waot me to come. He just wanted me to send a tape of my voice." Tucker said. Asked why he had waited so long before singing the role of Canio in "Pagliacci," one of the most famous tenor parts and one identified with Eorico Caruso. Tucker. 54. said: "I didn't feel I was ready. I hadn't matured enough. Now I feel I am ready.'

Masterpiece' Of Egyptian Art Found in Delta

CAIRO, Jan. S 1AP1.—A 2300. year-old statue of one of the last ruling phornohs has been unearthed in the Delta region of Egypt, about 84 miles north-east of Cairo, the state department of antiquities announced six-foot-tall statue was in very good condition. This implies, he said, that thieves have not plundered the region and therefore the archaeological treasures could be "abundant" in the area.

Dr. Hassan Sobity cl-Bakry, director general of the department, who examined the statue of Kheber Ka Ran found by an Egyptian archaeological team, described it as a masterpiece of ancient Egyptian art.
